

ABSTRACT of the DISCLOSURE.

The intercept valve, in particular for high-pressure washing guns in water-cleaning machines, comprises a main body having a tubular conformation, an obturator arranged internally of the main body and mobile between a closed position thereof and an open position thereof, an annular seating for the
5 obturator housed in a through-hole afforded in the main body, an activating pivot of the obturator which activating pivot is internally slidable in a through-hole afforded in the main body, means for manoeuvring which act on the activating pivot, and at least one seal arranged at the through-hole about the activating pivot and arranged adjacent to an internal mouth of the through-hole
10 afforded in the main body.